OLE BULL'S widow, who is young enough to be his granddaughter, will return at once to her parents at Eau Claire, Wis.

MRS. JOHN JACOB ASTOR drives the other women at Newport wild by wearing $800,000 worth of diamonds when she goes out with her knitting to spend the afternoon.

MRS. LINCOLN, the widow of a Union soldier, who keeps the postoffice at Weinsburg, Wayne county, Ohio, has been assessed on her fifty dollar salary by Blackmailer McPHERSON to help along the GARFIELD corruption fund. She won't pay a nickel.

Four million dollars worth of provisions were distributed in the famine districts of China by the American and English missionaries. Such beneficence has done more to open Northern China to Christians than all other means combined. Missionaries are now invited to preach in their temples and are made welcome in their homes. They say they want to hear about the one God that saved them from starvation when their gods failed to help.

OUR morning contemporary will please allow us a second reference to his editorial of yesterday on the subject of State Rights. He has been so little in the way of writing on subjects that either the public or ourselves feel any interest in that we had fallen into the habit of not turning to his columns until late in the day; and so, following our usual practice, we came near missing this editorial altogether, and did not discover it until there was but a few moments left for saying what we wanted to say.

It is rather a question of privilege than otherwise that we now rise to, but we deem it important to rise to it. That remark of yours about our having been a member of Congress as far back as the time of the CHARTERED resolutions, and our having then voted against appropriations for support of the war, touches us at points on which we are sensitive, viz: On our age, our patriotism, and our general standing. You must not measure our age by the wisdom and gravity of what we say, for that might lead you astray and make you think us older than we really are. You should remember that the wisdom of NESTOR is not wholly incompatible with the youth and vivacity of APOLLO, and that those who have lived longest do not always know most. Furthermore, the being, or having been, a member of Congress under Republican administration is a thing not to be lightly thrown up to a man. There are instances in which it may be as embarrassing to a man to be reminded of the time when he was in Congress, as it would be to remind another man of the time when he was in the penitentiary. It is a doubtful compliment in the present degraded state of the public service, and might even be considered as an affront, unless you know your man better than you seem to know us. We trust you will regard our acquaintance worth cultivating, our good opinion worth deserving, and with such good wishes on our part, we shall omit no opportunity for your instruction in State Rights, about which we are sorry to find you more deficient than we had supposed.

To the somewhat lengthy arraignment of the SENTINEL by the News for declining to publish Judge TAYLOR's fifteen paged reply to a simple question asked by a voter, we have to say that if Judge TAYLOR feels aggrieved by our course he has not made his grievance known to us. We should have been both pleased and gratified to have printed his answer. It was anxiously looked for, and the very fact that necessity existed for the Judge to answer and explain would have commanded eagerness of perusal. But fifteen pages of manuscript to be published gratuitously is, we think, rather a heavier draft on our individual resources than the Judge has any right to make, or we are under any obligation to respond to. Judge TAYLOR, we believe, has a press of his own and can reach the public any moment, and we submit it for the News, under the supervision of the public as judge of the case, whether the probable purpose of Judge TAYLOR in choosing the SENTINEL for his channel of reaching the public was not more with the double view of punishing the presumption of a voter and of annoying the paper that asked a troublesome question than it was to answer the question itself. If the public shall incline, as we do, to take this view of the matter, our contemporary will find himself entitled to an award of its contempt rather than a commiseration for the part it has taken in this matter. Judge TAYLOR was left to his own choice of press through which to answer—a press answer, rather than answer through any particular press, as what was asked of him, and if he allows himself to be balked by the refusal of the first one he applied to to print and publish fifteen pages of manuscript answer for nothing he could not have been very strongly bent on answering, and we are of the opinion he broke down and yielded to obstacles that he ought to have overcome by more obstinate perseverance. Giving up the attempt in the face of such trifling discouragement as the refusal of a single paper to publish his answer gratuitously must be accepted by the public as equivalent to refusing to answer at all. And what sort of conduct is this for a candidate for Congress? If we find these things in the green tree, what may we expect to find in the dry one when its fruit is all ripe? If he refuses to answer in a straightforward manner and resorts to subterfuge and countercheck when a candidate, with what arrogance may he not be expected to disport himself after election? He gives fair promise of becoming a bigger man than old GRANT if he keeps on in this way—but then we don't think he will keep on. A pretty pass, truly, when it has come to be an offence for a voter to ask an important question in a civil way of a candidate for Congress, and instead of getting his question fairly and squarely answered, is sought to be pilloried for his presumption in asking it. We suppose this is intended to illustrate "freedom of election" in its most recent and approved Republican form—an instance of that highly refined system of bulldozing to be found only in types of the very highest Republican civilization.

"Moss-backed and Rock-rooted." Now, as we maintain, the Government under which we have lived, which the Constitution created, was intended to be national in its national objects only, which were chiefly external; for the separate State governments still existed under their own constitutions, with their legislative, executive and judicial departments, having for their objects local and internal affairs. Congress could declare war, make peace, enter into treaties, coin money, regulate commerce, and do all acts characteristic of national sovereignty, and all these powers of national sovereignty were prohibited to the States; but all the reserved rights of the States and the people were vested by the people in the State Legislatures. Each State retained its municipal sovereignty, while the General Government became sovereign only in a national capacity. The term Federal, which is applied to our Constitution and Government, implies that each of the States retains its existence and sovereignty, subject to the limitations imposed by the Constitution, and is evidently distinguishable from consolidation which would suppose that the separate existence of each State was lost in the general body. The Government of the United States is a limited system, instituted for specific and particular purposes. The objects it embraces are such as relate to the general interests of the Union. Those of domestic or interior concern belong to the Legislatures of the respective States. When the term general is applied to the Government of the United States, it refers to the relation in which it stands, and not to the universality of its authority. So far in this editorial we have adopted and quoted literally from the speech of Hon. ALFRED P. EDGERTON, of this city, delivered at Metropolitan theatre, Indianapolis, Thursday evening, January 30th, 1868, on the occasion of his nomination for Lieutenant Governor by the Democratic State convention of that date. The whole speech is in accord with this single paragraph from it, and if printed and circulated as a campaign document to-day, with only changes of names of candidates and tables of calculations, and the additional statement of the fresh frauds and political villanies that have since crept into the public administration under sanction of the Republican party, it would be as applicable now as it was on the day of its first delivery. It reflects the same opinions, declares the same principles, and is animated by the same sentiments that Democrats hold to-day, and will continue to hold as the principles of right National and State Government, as long as their organization shall abide among the affairs of this terrestrial clod. Temporary policies as to banks, tariff or finance may change and succeed each other in the future as they have changed and succeeded each other in the past, but their subordination to the just supremacy of these opinions, principles and sentiments shall abide "to the last syllable of recorded time." To us they are as household Gods, to which we cling through all changes of time, place or circumstance, in peace and in war, in sunshine and in storm, amidst the agonizing throes of defeat, and the joyous acclamations of victory. The more they are scoffed at and derided, the closer we hug them to our bosoms, and the more carefully we teach them to our children; and it will be the last thought in our hearts to surrender them now when we are so near the moment of their final and triumphant establishment in the hearts and affections of a whole people. He that honors them, we embrace as a friend; he who holds them as "accursed," we denounce as a foe.

Yes, for illustration by way of parable, and as accepting for honor what we are taunted with as reproach, we Democrats joyously accept the gage of battle as "moss-backed and rock-rooted," by reason of our long abiding place on the firm and stable bulwarks of the constitution. The wicked may rage, and the Republican heathen imagine vain things; but this is our abiding place and rock of defence in which we dwell. We like the situation better than the boggy fens in which Republicans live in the midst of noxious exhalations. Its amplitude and extent of apartments is both charming and pleasant. Its beautiful walks and shaded groves of venerable trees, where our fathers trundled their hoops in boyhood and rested and refreshed themselves in old age, are dear to us. Even the very moss on the venerable building and on the old, old trees give to the place an odor of sanctity; and it is here we propose to stay, even though we have to live and die with Dixie, whom we joyfully welcome and accept as co-heir and joint tenant with ourselves. If to uphold these opinions and to practice these principles be, as the Republican candidate for Congress in this district charges, to "plot against the government," writes of arrest against every Democrat in the State, might as well be issued at once; for it is what every one of them is doing, and Judge Taylor, as a friend of the government, ought not to be an idle looker-on and see the plotting go on.

The Party and Not the Man.
LAWVILLE, INDIANA,
August 26, 1880.
Correspondence of the SENTINEL.
Hon. R. S. Taylor spoke here in Whittenberger's Hall last night to a very meagre audience, and not over enthusiastic at that. The Judge is a smooth talker and did not degenerate into personal abuse, but was absurd in the extreme.

He did not believe the charges made against Garfield, but they made no difference; it was the party and not the man, thus virtually saying that a rascal was as good as an honorable man. The principle would put a premium upon crime.

The next subject was finance. The Republican party gave the county good currency, gold and silver. In this he forgot all about Republican opposition to silver; he forgot all about Democratic legislation upon that subject. If the Democratic party got control of the government no one knew what it would do. He doubted whether God knew. We all know what the Republican party would do. Yes, its great infamous record is a criterion of what its future will be.

Lastly the Judge treated the hearers to a great harangue of the danger of letting the majority rule this country unless the majority were Republicans. He did not believe in sectionalism any further than that the Republican party of the north alone has the right to rule this country. Withal the Judge's speech was not a practical one, and not calculated to rouse the ignorant or convince intelligent persons, and his speech in Lawville had not the effect to gain him any votes. The Fort Wayne DAILY SENTINEL is very perceptibly improved, except in politics. While there is more work bestowed upon its columns than ever, that particular feature remains as obnoxious as ever.

Well, we never could please a Republican anyhow. However, our veteran editorial friend Williams has our thanks all the same.

Dr. Harter's FEVER & AGUE SPECIFIC

STANDS TO-DAY WITHOUT A RIVAL IN THE WORLD.
The cure of all kinds of Ague and Chills has no equal, having stood the test of universal use for thirty years in the most malarial districts. It never fails to cure, not merely removing for a time the symptoms, but eradicating the cause of the disease, thereby making a permanent cure. Price only 75 cts.

Manufactured by The Dr. Harter Medicine Co., No. 213 N. Main Street, St. Louis.
Rev. F. HACKMEIER, Supt. German Protestant Orphan's Home, St. Charles Rock Road, St. Louis Co., writing April 30th, 1877, says: "Dr. Harter's Fever and Ague Specific is a positive cure for Chills and Fever; has never failed with us."

Mr. Jno. C. WALBORN of Keosauqua, Ill., says: "I cured a little girl of Ague of three years' standing, with Dr. Harter's Fever and Ague Specific, after the best physicians failed to benefit her."

Dr. YOUNGBLOOD of Little York, Mo., says: "I have used Dr. Harter's Fever and Ague Specific in my practice, and can heartily recommend it to the public."

GARFIELD'S RECORD IN CONGRESS.

Under a Grant of Half a Million Under Peculiar Circumstances.

James A. Garfield occupies a position before the public similar to that of a convicted thief on trial for a second offense. The prosecutors have the right to show the previous bad conduct of the accused. He also has the privilege of offering extenuating circumstances in his own behalf if he can. The jury, which is the American people, will decide upon the weight of the evidence adduced. Mr. Garfield has a record. His public life is recorded in the printed volumes of congress. Every word that he has uttered on the floor of the House or before investigating committees is published. He has certified the correctness of this record by allowing it to be approved each day without protest. Whatever exists in the Congressional Record concerning the Republican candidate for President is true. Its accuracy cannot be questioned. His attempts to pervert the evidence taken in relation to the Credit Mobilier and DeGolyer scandals are both futile and imbecile. The facts cannot be changed as long as the Poland Report and the testimony taken by the Glover Committee exist.

I am informed that after Garfield had been crossed questioned, with results so fatal to his integrity and honor, by Col. Nickerson, concerning the bribe of $5,000 to secure the adoption of the worthless De Golyer pavement, he asked permission to revise his testimony. The request was granted, and he changed certain portions of his evidence in such a way as to make a very different impression upon the reader than it did the committee who listened to him.

The Credit Mobilier and the DeGolyer paying contracts were not the only jobs in which Garfield figured. While he generally covered his tracks with considerable skill, the fact that he seemed to be on intimate terms with lobbyists and jobbers aroused the suspicion of honest men against him. Mr. Garfield's connection with Pacific Mail was very suspicious. He was chairman of the committee on appropriations in 1874, a position which he occupied when his influence in behalf of the DeGolyer pavement was purchased. The Pacific Mail Steamship Company had obtained a conditional subsidy of half a million dollars. The New York Tribune, early in December, 1874, explained the situation in this language:

A HALF MILLION STEAL.

The first of the jobs makes its appearance at the Capitol early, and we regret to say, in one of Gen. Garfield's surprisingly prompt appropriation bills. We beg the General to relieve himself and his committee from responsibility for it at once. * * * The Pacific Mail was in the enjoyment of a subsidy of $500,000 per annum. Mr. Stockwell, one of its numerous retiring Presidents, succeeded in getting a law authorizing $500,000 more, on condition that enough new first-class iron steamers should be placed on the line to do the mail service by the 1st of October, 1875. The company failed to get them on by that time, has not yet got them on, and has only two of them, the Tokio and City of Peking, even built. The Postmaster-General reported this failure to Congress in December, 1875. Congress thereupon made no appropriation for the subsidy, and the bill itself only escaped defeat because of the view, generally expressed, that the company's failure to comply with the terms made it null. Congress being out of the way, Attorney-General Williams was appealed to for one of his opinions. He conveniently decided that the failure of a year or two, more or less, made no difference. Postmaster-General Jewell, new to the duties of his office, and easily imposed on in matters of routine, has been induced to estimate for the extra $500,000 subsidy as if it had been earned and Gen. Garfield has reported it to Congress in the Postal Appropriation bill. We call upon every friend of honesty in public service to watch this job, to resist it from the outset. We are unwilling to believe that either Gov. Jewell or Gen. Garfield could have been aware of its nature. But after this exposure there can be no decent pretext for continuing the claim.

On the 11th of December, 1874, Garfield rose to a personal explanation in reply to this paragraph. It would have been a very easy matter for the chairman of the committee to have said that the half million steal had not been inserted in the bill. He took good care not to do so, however, but in ambiguous language conveyed the impression to his associates that the bill containing the item had not been prepared.

I do not suppose that the editor of the New York Tribune desired to do injustice either to the committee on Appropriations or the Chairman of that committee. If it is clear that the editor was misled by some correspondent. * * * Of course, I need not say in the hearing of the House one word upon this subject. Every member of the House knows that the Committee on Appropriations has not yet reported the post office Appropriation bill to the House. * * *

Especially is it surprising when that journal two days before published the titles of all the appropriation bills which have been reported at this session, and the post office Appropriation bill was not of the number. I have no doubt the editor of the Tribune will be glad to make the correction. But I mention this to show with what facility and on what grounds men in public life are charged with unworthy motives and dishonorable motives.

Whether the bill had been completed or not at the time the Tribune correspondent learned that the job was to be foisted upon the House is immaterial. The bill was ultimately reported, and in it was the appropriation of $500,000 for Pacific Mail. Garfield defended the job to the best of his ability, but the load was too heavy to be carried, and the House struck the item from the bill. The Senate, by an overwhelming majority, refused to restore it.

AMONG THE STRAITS OF MACKINAC.

A Solid Democratic Village—But Six Republicans in a Population of Eight Hundred.

Correspondence of the SENTINEL.

MACKINAC, MICH., Aug. 25, 1880.

The island of Mackinac has become a resort of such celebrity that I presume a few lines concerning it will not be unwelcome to your readers. The island is situated in the middle of the Straits of Mackinac, and is a rocky promontory rising above the water to the height of two hundred and twenty feet. In form it is nearly oval and in circumference is said to measure fifteen miles. The Bay of Mackinac is a rounded indentation in the southern shore of the island, of such regular contour as to suggest the Bay of Naples. Here is a haven of safety for vessels of any size or description in the roughest weather, and the occurrence is not infrequent that the heaviest craft is moored at the dock in perfect repose, while a furious sea rages through the straits a thousand feet out.

Chief among the attractions of the place is the fort—a solid structure of stone, overlooking the bay at an altitude of 200 feet. No tourist fails to make a visit to this military establishment, which is kept with scrupulous neatness and system.

The garrison numbers sixty, whose parade at noon of each day is witnessed by numbers of delighted spectators. Every morning at sunrise and every evening at sunset a gun is fired, and for the interval the stars and stripes wave above the island in view of all vessels in the straits. There is an air of romance about this Fort at night, especially on a moonlight night, when visitors promenade on the village street along the bay, and look up at the silent sentinel whose dark figure is seen against the sky marching back and forward on the parapet.

In the shade of this Fort and under the protection of its guns, and on a single street lies the village of Mackinac. Like the Fort, the houses are painted or white-washed, presenting to the approaching passenger an attractive picture, but looking ordinary enough on close inspection. Despite its isolated position and its high latitude, its merchants are prosperous, and its politics, though as turbulent as the sea around it, strongly Democratic. As a straw of unusual length, I may be permitted to mention that in a population of eight hundred there are but six Republicans. A Hancock and English steamer spans the street, while the well known portrait of Hancock is omnipresent to the promenade. It is not derogatory to the dominant party that the president of the village is a saloon keeper, as acquaintance with the villagers reveals the singular paradox that the saloon keepers are in the van of the liberal-minded and enterprising inhabitants. It is perhaps superfluous in dismissing the subject of politics to mention that Hayes' civil service order No. 1 is obeyed with the most inflexible fidelity.

From its position it may readily be comprehended that the island possesses uncommon attractions for all classes of persons, its combination of the purest air with the most agreeable temperature making it equally attractive to the invalid and the pleasure seeker. It is, therefore, not surprising that the chief inconvenience here is the lack of accommodations. A dozen hotels are insufficient for the proper entertainment of the crowds that come during July and August, many persons being obliged to make terms with flinty old widows, whose husbands succumbed many years ago.

This peculiar state of things has given currency to the saying that there are no husbands left in Mackinac after their silver wedding.

"Twist it and turn it as you can, 'She'll still be double you (W.) O man.'"

However, this is but a trifling consideration, as people come here to live in the air and spend but little time indoors. They are found climbing the rocks, picnicking on the beach, or sailing on the lake. A very agreeable diversion is to ride over the island and view the numerous points of interest to be seen on top, such as Lover's Leap, Arch Rock, Sugar Loaf, Devil's Kitchen, etc. From Holmes, the highest point on the island, is a view of wonderful and sublime grandeur. Here the spectator may embrace Lake Michigan to his right and Lake Huron to his left, and in the same glance look upon Point St. Ignace, Cheboygan and Old Mackinaw, twelve miles distant. Another favorite trip is to sail down the lake fifteen miles to a fishing haunt, called the "Cherieux" (the Schnows).

This place bears an excellent reputation for abundant fishing and is, therefore, exceedingly enticing. But I have seen no one who has returned and given any further evidence of success than his own unsteady statement.

Among the Fort Wayne representatives I have met Mrs. Montgomery Hamilton and daughters, Mrs. Allen Hamilton and daughters, Mr. J. D. Nuttman, Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Hayden and Mrs. Hanna.

The season will soon close and visitors are already beginning the general homeward stampede, and then Mackinac will be left in the cold for the winter. Respectfully,

JNO. MOHR, JR.

Madison Township, August 23.—

Peter Bovie has moved to Sheldon.

Miss Rosa Cole gave a dance at her parents' residence last Tuesday evening.

Adam Marquardt and a lot of his neighbors raised a beautiful Hancock pole two miles west of Monroeville last Wednesday evening. E. G. Co-verdale and Mahlon Heller, of Monroeville, delivered good political speeches. The Monroeville cornet band was there to keep things lively and jolly time was had.

Last Saturday evening the happy Hoaglanders raised a beautiful Hancock pole in the midst of their little 'burg. A number of eloquent speeches were made by Governor Block-roeyer, of Missouri, M. F. Schmetzer, W. S. O'Rourke, Frank Cosgrove, Judge Sinclair, of Fort Wayne, and McHenry, of Maples. X.

"Long-winded but Able."

From the Columbia City Post.

The Fort Wayne SENTINEL editorials are long-winded. Perhaps that is metropolitan style, however. They are able, though.

USEFUL TO KNOW.

Rose Water.—Procure a glass bottle with a wide mouth and ground glass stopper; fill two-thirds full with deodorized alcohol, and keep adding rose leaves until you cannot force more into the bottle. Let the whole stand for several months, keeping it air-tight, and strain when the virtue has left the leaves. White roses are the best.

Coffee in Typhoid Fever.—Dr. Guillaume, of the French navy, reports that in the early stages of the disease coffee is almost a specific against typhoid fever. He gives to adults two or three tablespoonfuls of strong black coffee every two hours, alternating with one or two teaspoonfuls of claret or Burgundy wine. The beneficial effect is immediate. A little lemonade or citrate of magnesia should be given daily, and after a while quinine.

Lobster Croquettes.—Mince the flesh of a lobster, season with salt, spices and a little cayenne. Melt a piece of butter in a saucepan, mix with it a tablespoonful of flour, then the lobster and some chopped parsley; moisten with a little stock, until the mixture looks like minced veal; then stir into it off the fire a couple of yolks of eggs, and put it by to get cold. When nearly so shape it into the form of corks, egg them, and roll them in bread crumbs. After the lapse of an hour egg and bread-crumbs them again taking care to preserve the shape. After a little time fry them a nice color in hot lard.

LANDERS AND PORTER.

They are to Meet in Joint Discussion in Fort Wayne.

As will be seen by the following letter from Hon. William H. English, Chairman of the State Central Committee, a joint political discussion between the Democratic and Republican candidates for Governor has been arranged to take place in this city:

Rooms of the Democratic State Central Committee,

Indianapolis, August 24, 1890.

C. Hettler, Esq., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

DEAR SIR:—

I am directed to advise you that Hon. Franklin Landers, Democratic candidate for Governor, and Hon. A. G. Porter, Republican candidate, will meet in joint political debate at Ft. Wayne, on Friday, September 3d.

Please see to it that the necessary arrangements are made with the Republican Committee of your county for said meeting.

Very respectfully yours,

WM. H. ENGLISH,

Chairman.

ELLISON'S ELOQUENCE.

A Rousing Meeting and Eloquent Speeches.

Hon. A. Ellison, of Lagrange, and Judge Trannor, of Ohio,

Address a Vast Crowd.

The circuit court room last evening was filled to its utmost capacity with an intelligent and appreciative audience, which assembled for the purpose of hearing the issues of the hour presented by one who himself has grown old in the Democratic faith. There was a goodly sprinkling of ladies in the audience who seemed to take great interest in the cause.

Hon. Andrew Ellison, the speaker of the evening occupied a seat within the enclosure surrounded by Judges Lowry and O'Rourke and a number of other prominent citizens. Mr. Ellison is a man who, in any place and on occasion attracts attention. His tall commanding figure, his clear cut feature and above all that determination of character which every flash of his eye bespeaks. In age he has reached the turning point in life and his hair is already white. He bears himself proudly as though thoroughly conscious of the righteousness of his cause.

At precisely eight o'clock Judge Lowry introduced Mr. Ellison in a neat and fitting speech in which he said that Mr. Ellison was a Nestor of Democracy and a man who throughout his entire life has been the fearless exponent of Democracy and its heaven born principles.

Mr. Ellison came forward and was loudly cheered. When the enthusiasm had somewhat subsided he said that he was there principally for the purpose of addressing himself to the young men who he believed would be one of the greatest factors in the coming struggle and bid them be wary and when the time comes cast their ballots for free and honest government and bear aloft the banner of Democracy to victory. The time is coming when this country will once more pass into the hands of the party to whose fidelity and support it owes its existence. He gloried in the thought that misrule and corruption had almost run their race and the leaders of the present corrupt administration, who have sought power only to profit by it, are to be relegated to oblivion and the party who has ever stood by the Republic, even when the clouds of war appeared above the horizon and the wave tossed ship of state was on the verge of destruction. A government does not exist merely for the purpose of collecting revenue and then expending it upon officers who are mere leeches upon the public treasury. The Government was established for the people and by the people, and only through the people can a Government like this exist and prosper.

In alluding to the treatment of foreigners he stated that the Democratic party had ever been their friend, and when they sought America's shores, driven by persecution and want from their homes in the old World, the Democracy took them under its protecting wings and helped them to establish their homes.

America is the home of the exile, made such during the palmy days when Democratic rule was in existence.

Speaking of traitors and how the charge of treason is laid at the door of the Democratic party he grew grandly eloquent and denied the charge. He appealed to the soldiers of the Republican party who had marched forth to battle for their common interest side by side with Democrats, if they believed that their brethren in arms were traitorous to their country, and whether there were not as brave and true-hearted democratic soldiers as any who ever entered the ranks. He denounced the whisky rings and the frauds of '76 in a scathing manner, and bid Democrats take courage from the past, and when the eventful day in next November, which is to decide the fate of this republic, shall come, let all cast their ballots in the right direction, and let vengeance swift and terrible overtake those scoffers of right and justice who have so long ruled, let them be consigned to oblivion and the vengeance of a long-suffering people. At the close and at intervals during his speech the speaker was heartily cheered.

and his eloquence and logic swept all before it. There were many Republicans in the hall who came to hear the truth and that they did hear it, is best attested by the fact that two of them, at least, signified their intention to vote for Hancock.

Judge Lowry announced that those who desired to hear Judge Trannor, of Ohio, discuss the situation should proceed to Court street where a stand was erected from which he would address them. Judge Trannor was introduced by Judge Lowry. The former stated that owing to the lateness of the hour he would make no speech of any length, but the manner in which he arraigned the Republican party in his short address was a caution. When he had concluded a martial band discoursed some inspiring music, and when three rousing cheers had been given for Hancock and English the vast assembly dispersed.

John N. Vesta, Esq., editor and proprietor of the Plainfield, Indiana, Hendricks county Citizen, in a recent communication, says: "St. Jacobs Oil is making a most favorable impression hereabouts." The trade press and people everywhere, are talking about this wonderful remedy for rheumatism. Messrs. Wangler Bros., of Waterloo, Iowa, say it is perfectly easy for them to obtain five hundred testimonials as to its efficacy. And thus roll the good news along.

A CARD.

Habitual Constipation

is the bane of nearly every American woman. From it usually arises those disorders that so surely undermine their health and strength. Every woman owes it to herself and to her family to use that celebrated medicine, Kidney-Wort. It is the sure remedy for constipation, and for all disorders of the kidneys and liver. Try it now.

Death in the Flames

Is easy compared to the torture of dyspepsia, headache, rheumatic pains, disordered liver, bowels, stomach and kidneys, bilious fever, belchings, sleeplessness, nervousness and other distressing complaints that drugs will not cure, but yield at once to Dr. Flegg's Improved Liver and Stomach Pad. For sale at room No. 3, Sweetney Block.

Arrowroot Drink.—Mix two spoonfuls of arrowroot in about three tablespoonfuls of cold water, then pour in about half a pint of boiling water; when well mixed add, by degrees a pint of cold water, stirring all the time, so as to make it perfectly smooth. It should be about the consistency of cream; if too thick, a little more water may be added. Then pour two wine glassfuls of sherry and one of brandy; add sugar to taste, and give it to the patient in a tumbler; a lump of ice may be added.

Cold Process for Canning Peaches.—Pare and halve the peaches. Pack them as closely as possible in a can without any sugar. When the can is full pour in sufficient pure cold water to fill all the interstices between the peaches and reach the brim of the can. Let it stand long enough for the water to soak into all the crevices—say six hours—then pour in water to replace what is sunk away. Seal up the can. Canned in this way peaches retain all their freshness and flavor. There will not be enough water in them to render them insipid.

Mme. DEMOREST'S

Patterns

Given

Away.

Mme. Demorest having broken faith with us, by putting her patterns on sale in two other establishments in town, and having failed to make good her promise to these two parties, as well as ourselves, we have decided to drop her patterns, very much as people drop a hot potato.

Tuesday morning, August 24th, we shall commence to dispose of them after this fashion: Every customer purchasing goods in any of our departments, to the amount of one dollar and upwards, will be handed a catalogue of Mme. Demorest's latest styles of patterns, from which they will be requested to select one pattern which they most desire. This will then be wrapped up with their goods free of charge. This system will be continued from day to day until the entire stock on hand has been given away. These patterns are for basques, train skirts, walking skirts, overskirts, walking costumes, princess dresses, wrappers, polonaises, cloaks, jackets, blouses, dolmans, ulsters, &c., for ladies and misses, also a full line of patterns for ladies' underwear, and for boys' and children's suits. There is not an old pattern in the entire lot.

As we are anxious to close them out at once, we hope our friends will not be backward in coming forward to secure them. The usual prices of these patterns are 20, 25, and 30 cents.

FOSTER BROS.
